Errors

3B does its best to provide the most accurate information on its website. However, errors regarding products (including pricing and availability) do occasionally occur. 3B reserves the right to correct these errors as soon as it becomes aware of them.

Opting Out

3B may email users electronic newsletters, announcements, surveys or other information. If users prefer not to receive any or all of these communications, they may opt out by following the directions provided within the body of these emails.

Third-Party Links

On occasion, the 3B website features links to other websites. 3B does not take responsibility for the content, functionality or requirements of these websites.

Age Restrictions

By using the 3B website, users consent to being of legal viewing age in their country. Per the conditions of the Children's Online Privacy Protection Act (COPPA) of 1998, 3B requires all users in the United States to be at least 13 years of age.

Types of Information 3B Collects

Personal Information

Personal information is data that is associated with a username or personal identity. 3B uses this information to better understand users' needs and interests, and to provide them with the best service. On some 3B website pages, users may be able to request information, subscribe to mailing lists, participate in online discussions, collaborate on documents, provide feedback, submit information into registries, register for events, apply for membership, or join technical committees or working groups. The types of personal information users provide on these pages may include name, address, phone number, email address, usernames, passwords and billing information.

Non-Personal Information

Non-personal information is data about usage and service operation that is not directly associated with personal identity. It includes aggregate information, log files and cookies.

Aggregate Information

3B may gather aggregate information, which refers to the data each user's computer automatically provides. This information cannot be linked back to the specific user. Examples include referral data (the websites users visit immediately before and after the 3B website), pages viewed, time spent on the 3B website and Internet Protocol (IP) address – a number that is automatically assigned to a user's computer whenever they access the internet. For example, when a user requests a page from the 3B website, its servers log the associated IP address to create aggregate reports on user demographics and traffic patterns, and for purposes of system administration.

Log Files

Every time a user requests or downloads a file from the 3B website, 3B may store data about these events and the associated IP address in a log file. 3B may use this information to analyze trends, administer the website, track user movement, and gather broad demographic information for aggregate use or for other business purposes.

Cookies

The 3B website may employ a web browser feature to set a “cookie” on users’ computers. Cookies are small packets of information that a website’s server stores on a user’s computer. Afterward, the website can read the cookies whenever a user visits the website. 3B may use cookies in a number of ways, such as to save users’ passwords so they don’t need to re-enter them each time they visit the website, to deliver content specific to users’ interests and to track the pages they’ve visited. These cookies allow 3B to use the information it collects to customize users’ experiences so their website visits are as relevant and as valuable as possible. Most browser software can be set up to enable or disable cookies. Users may modify their browser preference to provide them with choices relating to cookies. Users have the choice to accept all cookies, to be notified when a cookie is set or to reject all cookies. If users choose to reject cookies, certain functions and conveniences of the 3B website may not work properly. Users may be unable to use certain 3B services that require registration in order to participate, or may need to re-register each time they visit the website. Most browsers offer instructions on how to reset the preference to reject cookies in the “Help” section of the toolbar. 3B does not link non-personal information from cookies to personally identifiable information without user permission.

How 3B Uses Information from Users

3B does not sell, rent or lease users’ personal information or lists of email addresses to anyone or any company for marketing purposes, and takes commercially reasonable steps to maintain the security of this information.

3B may use non-personal data that is aggregated for reporting about its website usability, performance and effectiveness. This data may be used to improve the experience, usability and content of the 3B website.

Information Sharing

3B reserves the right to supply users' information to any organization with which 3B may merge in the future or to which it may make any transfer in order to enable a third party to continue part or all of 3B services. 3B also reserves the right to release personal information to protect its systems or business when the company reasonably believes a user to be in violation of these terms and conditions, or if 3B reasonably believes a user to have initiated or participated in any illegal activity. In certain circumstances, 3B may be obligated to release users' personal information pursuant to judicial or other government subpoenas, warrants or other orders.

Any information (including personal information) that users disclose in public areas of the 3B website, such as forums, message boards and newsgroups, becomes public information that others may collect, circulate and use. Because 3B cannot and does not control the acts of others, users should exercise caution when deciding to disclose information about themselves or others in public forums such as these.

Access to & Accuracy of User Information

3B is committed to keeping the personal information of its participating organizations accurate. All the information users submit to 3B can be verified and changed. In order to do this, users should email a request to info@outdoor3b.com. 3B may provide users' with online access to their personal profiles, enabling them to update or delete information at any time. To protect its users privacy and security, 3B also may take reasonable steps to verify identity, such as username and password, before granting access to modify personal profile data. Certain areas of the 3B website may limit access to specific individuals through the use of passwords or other personal identifiers. A password prompt is an indication that a user-only resource is being accessed.

Security

3B makes every effort to protect the personal information of its website users, including the use of firewalls and other security measures on its servers. However, no server is 100% secure and users should take this into account when submitting personal or confidential information about themselves on any website. Much of the personal information is used in conjunction with participation-level services such as collaboration and discussion, so some types of personal information such as usernames, company affiliations, and email addresses will be visible to other 3B users and to the public. 3B assumes no liability for the interception, alteration or misuse of the information users provide. Users are responsible for maintaining the secrecy of their personal information.
